Military History: A Selected Bibliography

Williamson Murray
This work was conducted under contract DASW01 98 C 0067, Task AI-8-1627, for the Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics. The publication of this IDA document does not indicate endorsement by the Department of Defense, nor should the contents be construed as reflecting the official position of that Agency.

The material may be reproduced by or for the U.S. Government pursuant to the copyright license under the clause at DFARS 252.227-7013 (NOV 95)
Military History: A Selected Bibliography

Williamson Murray
All professions can learn from their histories, the profession of arms more than most. The centrality of life and death issues is one reason. Another is that in spite of rapid and persistent introduction of new technologies, some aspects of the profession change much more slowly. The dynamics of human and group behavior in combat is a prime example.

Military historian Wick Murray has prepared this bibliography as a guide to the vast body of military histories in existence today. We are making it available to those in the Department of Defense and the Services who feel that history can shed some light on the problems they confront today.

I invite your comments and feedback, which should be directed to:

Joint Advanced Warfighting Program
ATTN: Williamson Murray
4850 Mark Center Drive
Alexandria, VA 22311-1882
Telephone: 703.845.6640
Fax: 703.845.6810
E-mail: wmurray@ida.org

Ted Gold
Preface

This paper was prepared under the task order Joint Advanced Warfighting Program (JAWP) for the Director, Defense Research and Engineering in the Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics. JAWP is making it available to individuals in DoD and the Services who feel that history can shed light on the problems they confront today.

The JAWP was established at the Institute for Defense Analyses (IDA) by the Office of the Secretary of Defense and the Joint Staff to serve as a catalyst for stimulating innovation and breakthrough change. The JAWP Team is composed of military personnel on joint assignments from each Service and civilian analysts from IDA. The JAWP is located principally in Alexandria, Virginia, but includes an office in Norfolk, Virginia, that facilitates coordination with the United States Joint Forces Command.

This paper does not necessarily reflect the views of IDA or the sponsors of the JAWP. Our intent is to stimulate ideas, discussion, and, ultimately, the discovery and innovation that must fuel successful transformation.
Contents

1. The Essential Military History Library ................................................................. 1
2. General Works: Military Theory and Strategy ......................................................... 9
3. Ancient Warfare to 500 AD ................................................................. 14
4. Medieval Warfare (500–1450) ........................................................................ 16
5. Early Modern Warfare (1450–1685) ............................................................. 17
6. The Eighteenth Century (1686–1789) .......................................................... 19
7. The French Revolution and Napoleon (1789–1815) ........................................ 21
8. The Nineteenth Century (1815–1890) ........................................................... 24
9. The American Civil War (1861–1865) ............................................................. 26
10. Naval Warfare to 1900 ..................................................................................... 28
11. First World War: Background (1890–1914) ....................................................... 30
12. First World War: General (1914–1918) ............................................................ 32
13. The First World War: Campaigns (1914–1918) .............................................. 34
14. The First World War: Literature ...................................................................... 37
15. Naval Warfare (1900–1920) ............................................................................. 39
16. The First World War: Memoirs, Diaries, and Biographies .................................. 40
17. The Interwar Period (1919–1939) .................................................................. 42
18. The Second World War: General Works .......................................................... 47
19. The Second World War: Strategy ..................................................................... 50
20. The Second World War: Western Europe and the Mediterranean (1939–1945) .... 52
22. The Second World War: Air Power ................................................................... 58
23. The Second World War: Memoirs, Diaries, Biographies, and Literature ............. 61
24. The Second World War: The War at Sea and in the Pacific ............................... 65
25. The Second World War: Intelligence (1939–1945) .......................................... 68
26. War and Strategy Since 1945 ........................................................................... 70
This bibliography is derived from the substantial literature on European and American military history. The works were chosen for a variety of reasons: quality of scholarship, point of view, subject matter, and readability. The list is not exhaustive but aims at providing those interested in particular areas of military history or theory in general with a guide to the available literature.

The books are categorized into sections according to period and subject matter. Books marked with one or more asterisks (*) are particularly worthy of note or attention, with the more stars the greater the book. For the convenience of the reader, I have pulled the five-star selections into their own chapter at the beginning of the bibliography. These represent an “essential” library for the warfighter, scholar, or student of military history.
1. The Essential Military History Library

Because of its very nature, a list of the twenty-five most essential books in military history will reflect the prejudices as well as the idiosyncrasies of its author. Not all of the books on this list represent an easy read; I have chosen them for their depth of insight and their understanding of the wider issues involved in war. And many of the books that I have given four stars could arguably have been included in the five-star list.

Above all, this list is aimed at helping the interested reader develop a reading program that extends his or her understanding and comprehension of that terrible, yet intriguing, human phenomenon that is war. I have listed the twenty-five books in chronological order: any ranking system of their relative worth would be hopelessly pedantic.

Ancient Warfare to 500 AD

Thucydides. History of the Peloponnesian War. Translated by Rex Warner. The Warner translation of Thucydides is the most eloquent, but the reader might also consider using The Landmark Thucydides, edited by Robert B. Strassler, which contains outstanding maps. One of the ironies of the writing of military history is that the greatest book on war ever written was the second history\(^1\) ever written, namely, this work. Thucydides examines the great themes of war from the highest levels of the making of strategy and policy to the moral dimensions and the sharp end of battle. Few military historians have done it as well, none better. There are, however, difficulties. Readers must take their time in reading this work. They must familiarize themselves with the geography of ancient Greece. And they must also take care to understand who the players are. Finally, what appears to be an archaic device, the speeches, contains the crucial arguments over the strategy, policy, expediency, morality, and the nature of war.

---

\(^1\) Herodotus’s history on the wars between Greece and Persia (499–479 BC).
Victor David Hanson. The Western Way of War, Infantry Battle in Classical Greece. Hanson has written a number of important and interesting historical studies. But this is by far and away the most important and interesting of his works. The Western Way of War is the finest book on the sharp end of combat ever written by a historian—even better than John Keegan’s Face of Battle. This is a book the success of which entirely rests on an extraordinary familiarity and use of the available sources to create a picture of war in classical Greece that is clear and lucid. Hanson’s book is an imaginative understanding of a form of warfare and society that have not existed for two and a half millennia. It also suggests that the Greek way of warfare has informed and influenced the “western way of war” ever since. A must read for the military professional as well as for the reader interested in military history.

The Eighteenth Century (1686–1789)

Winston S. Churchill. The Life of Marlborough. Four vols. This work on Churchill’s great warrior ancestor, John Churchill, the Duke of Marlborough, represents the finest piece of writing and analysis that Churchill was to do in his long and productive life. It is eloquent, sweeping, and magisterial, as only Churchill can be. Modern scholarship has indicated flaws in the great man’s analysis, but what makes this such a brilliant work is the fact that Churchill understood how great statesmen and generals interacted, since he was one himself. This is rousing, thrilling military history, written in a style that made Churchill arguably the greatest writer of English prose in the nineteenth century. Its power of analysis and understanding also underlines how Churchill was to be such a crucial figure in the winning of the Second World War.

Fred Anderson. Crucible of War, The Seven Year’s War and the Fate of Empire in British North America, 1754–1766. Anderson examines the Seven Years War (known to Americans as the French and Indian War) from the highest levels of strategy and policy to the impact of chance and friction on human affairs. This is a work of great eloquence and deep insight. It underlines the contingency of human affairs and the flawed reaction of human beings under the terrible pressures of war. In the end Anderson explains how and why the British were able to win so decisively and to suggest how the very decisiveness of that victory would inevitably set the stage for the American Revolution.
General Works: Military Theory and Strategy

Carl von Clausewitz. On War, translated and edited by Michael Howard and Peter Paret. Of all the books written about war, Clausewitz’s On War represents the most ambitious effort ever made by a theorist of human conflict to systematize war and understand it for what it is. Because its author died before it was completed, On War does have some rough patches, and portions of it are no longer relevant to the modern world. Nevertheless, much of it is entirely relevant to the modern condition. It does require that the reader examine its concepts, ponder its arguments, and test its ideas against the laboratory of war, namely military history. Above all, it deserves to be reread again and again to draw out its wisdom.

Peter Paret. Clausewitz and the State. The book is a study of intellectual and social history as well as the influences that led Clausewitz to produce On War. It sounds like a recipe for an incredibly boring book; it is not. Paret lays out in a clear even-handed narrative Clausewitz’s life and the influence that eventually led him to produce one of the few theoretical studies of war that is worth reading. For readers interested in serious military history as well as in understanding the writings of the great Prussian theorist, this is the place to start.

The French Revolution and Napoleon (1789–1815)

Leo Tolstoy. War and Peace. The very size of one of the greatest novels ever written presents the reader with a formidable challenge. For military professionals with little time on their hands, the challenge is even more daunting—especially since the bulk of the novel has little to do with war but rather the social interactions that take place within a family. But the two sections dealing with the Austerlitz campaign and the 1812 campaign represent a brilliant and eloquent examination of war by a great novelist and former combat officer. My feeling is that Tolstoy’s depiction of the Battle of Borodino in 1812 and the events leading up to that terrible battle is the finest piece of fiction about war ever written. And even if the reader disagrees in the end with Tolstoy’s pacifism, the novelist’s arguments are well worth considering.

The American Civil War (1861–1865)

Ulysses S. Grant. Personal Memoirs, 2 vols. Most memoirs by generals are filled with lies, deceptions, and half-truths. Grant’s memoirs represent one of the few exceptions to that rule, being honest, deeply insightful, and a brilliant piece of writing. Mark Twain argued that Grant’s memoirs were the greatest piece of English literature written in the nineteenth century. (He may well have been right.) Grant wrote these memoirs in the last two years of his life when he knew he was dying. His style appears to be simple, direct, and honest. In fact, it contains sharp and deep observations on the character of his contemporaries and opponents as well as the basic issues involved in the Civil War. The Memoirs are a must read for anyone who considers himself or herself as a serious historian of the American Civil War.

James M. McPherson. Battle Cry of Freedom: The Civil War Era. There are relatively few books that through their eloquence, their depth of knowledge, and their breadth of vision manage to overturn the generally held conceptions about an historical period. McPherson’s study of the Civil War is such a work. In the largest sense, McPherson entirely overturns the idea that the antebellum South was a society on the defensive against the swelling tide of history. Rather its very aggressiveness contributed mightily to the outbreak of the war. What makes this a particularly compelling book is McPherson’s ability to interweave military events with the political and strategic context of the war. After Grant’s memoirs, this is the greatest book about the American Civil War. Battle Cry of Freedom won its author a Pulitzer Prize but the contempt of his colleagues because it was popular with the general public.

General Works: Military Theory and Strategy

Michael Howard. War and the Liberal Conscience. Michael Howard is the premier military historian of the twentieth century. He is the only author with two books on this list. In this work he examines the intellectual framework that has made war such a difficult phenomenon for the West, particularly in liberal Britain and the United States, to come to grips with. This is intellectual prose at its best. And Professor Howard is truly one of the magisterial writers of the English language. This work represents a brilliant examination of an intellectual framework that has increasingly dominated the Western world, best exemplified by the 1933 Oxford Union motion that there was no cause worth fighting for, including king and country.

The First World War: Literature

Frederic Manning. The Middle Parts of Fortune. Michael Howard considers The Middle Parts of Fortune to be the finest piece of literature written about war. So do I. It

2 The other being volume 4 of his Grand Strategy, August 1942–August 1943. See page 6.

3 “That this House will not in no circumstances fight for King and Country.”
is set on the Western Front in one of the great killing battles of 1917. The author catches the dialect and the language of his soldiers in a fashion that few authors have been able to do. It is a grim tale, made even grimmer by the death of its hero. And it captures the sound and landscape of the war that in its course led to the development of modern war. It is a great but depressing read.

Vera Brittain. Testament of Youth. Few books cover the impact that war has on women and their lives better than this memoir of the First World War. At times Brittain’s account is overly long, and her account of her post-war efforts in pacifist causes detracts from the terrible sense of tragedy and loss that hangs like a dark angel over her account of the war. The author was admitted to Oxford just before the war broke out, but then volunteered to serve as a nurse. During the course of the war she fell in love with several young men. They were all to be killed, as was her brother. No other author has managed to convey the sense of loss at the death of one’s companions and lovers.

The Interwar Period (1919–1939)

Allan R. Millett. In Many a Strife, General Gerald C. Thomas and the US Marine Corps, 1917–1956. This is a first-rate study of the life of one of a cadre of marine officers who made the US Marine Corps a fourth service. At one level it is a wonderful study of the life of a brilliant staff officer and commander. But at another level it is an insightful study into what at its heart the profession of arms has come to represent. It is the finest piece of military history that Millett has written in his long and productive career.

The Second World War: General Works

R. V. Jones. The Wizard War: British Scientific Intelligence, 1939–1945. R. V. Jones was a young scientist at the beginning of the Second World War who became the head of Britain’s effort in scientific intelligence. His memoir is a brilliant piece of writing and analysis that brings a deep understanding of the development of wartime science and the business of intelligence to the reader. In the end, Jones contribution to the winning of the war ranks only slightly below that of Churchill’s, and yet his telling of his contribution is modest and self-effacing throughout. In every respect this is a wonderful book.

MacGregor Knox. Mussolini Unleashed, Politics and Strategy in Fascist Italy’s Last War. In this extraordinary study of Mussolini, MacGregor Knox lays bare the extraordinary details of the incompetence of Italy’s military institutions that sacrificed the lives of innumerable brave Italians in the Second World War. It also entirely destroys the myth that Italy’s entrance into the war was foisted on an unwilling Italian people by Mussolini. For readers who want to understand why the military institutions of the Third World have so often collapsed on the battlefield before the institutions of the First World, this is an enlightening study.

Gerhard Weinberg. A World at Arms, A Global History of World War II. This political and strategic history of the Second World War stands as a monument to brilliant scholarship that has made Weinberg the greatest historian of the Second World War. Quite simply, no historian in the future is likely to master the documentary evidence to the extent that Weinberg has managed to do. While the length of the work may intimidate many readers (along with the extraordinary footnotes), the book presents the most balanced account of the war yet written. A World at Arms is solidly written, but it is the mastery of the details and of the complexity of the war at every level that makes this such an outstanding work of history.

The Second World War: Strategy

Michael Howard. Grand Strategy, vol. 4, August 1942–August 1943. Rarely does official history rise above a standard of average. In this case Michael Howard has not only written the definitive history of British grand strategy in the crucial period between 1942 and 1943, but he has done so with style and panache. Where by its very nature official history tends to be partisan in attributing most errors to Allies, Howard is scrupulously fair in his treatment of the American side of the story.

The Second World War: Air Power

Sir Charles Webster and Noble Frankland. The Strategic Bombing Offensive Against Germany. Three vols. As with Michael Howard’s official history of the Mediterranean Theater in 1942 and 1943 (Grand Strategy), Webster and Frankland have written brilliant piece of official history in their account of Bomber Command’s valiant but fundamentally flawed conduct of its bombing offensive against Germany. When it was published in the early 1960s, it raised the hackles of airmen for the rigorous standards of truth with which it told its story. This is superb military history, and while its length may be intimidating, it reads easily and well with extraordinary analytic power. No one can call himself or herself a student of air power unless they have read the three volumes in this history.
The Second World War: Memoirs, Diaries, Biographies, and Literature

George MacDonald Fraser. Quartered Safe Out Here, A Recollection of the War in Burma. George MacDonald Fraser is the author of the innumerable volumes in the Flashman series. In this memoir he recounts his experiences as a teen-aged combat infantryman, serving in William Slim’s 14th Army. His tale is brilliantly written—at times sad, at times gripping, at times hilarious, but always readable. Fraser’s powers of observation are extraordinary, as well as his ability to sum up a point in a few words. His description of Slim is brilliant. In addressing his men and the Burma campaign after the war, Slim “never said I, rarely said we, and almost always said you did.”

William Slim. Defeat into Victory. Besides Ulysses S. Grant’s memoirs, Slim’s memoirs ranks as one of the great works of military literature, both for its insights as well as for its honesty. And like Grant, Slim has few pretensions about his own “greatness.” Instead he tells how he took a beaten and demoralized army and rebuilt it into one of the finest military organizations in the Second World War. He then recounts his conduct of the war and the re-conquest of Burma against the odds of weather and tenacious resistance of the Japanese. It is a great tale told by one of the great captains of history. And in the end it is about a great leader.

E. B. Sledge. With the Old Breed at Peleliu and Okinawa. E. B. Sledge survived two of the nastiest battles of the Second World War and returned to Alabama to serve his community as a professor of chemistry. He also wrote one of the finest accounts of combat ever written. With the Old Breed is a story of leadership, comradeship, and marines under the terrible circumstances of combat against a fanatical opponent. It is a great piece of autobiography and a tribute to the marines who fought in these terrible battles.

The Second World War: The War at Sea and in the Pacific

Richard B. Frank. Downfall, The End of the Imperial Japanese Empire. Richard Frank survived a combat tour in Vietnam with the 173rd Airborne Brigade. He returned to the United States to become a lawyer. He has also become a first-rate military historian. His study of the surrender of the Japanese Empire as a direct result of the dropping of the atomic bombs quite simply destroyed fifty years of academic nonsense written about the atomic weapons. Thoroughly researched and clearly written, Downfall is brilliant military and political history. It is a must read for anyone interested in the history of the Pacific War.

The Second World War: Intelligence (1939–1945)

Patrick Beasley. Very Special Intelligence. This memoir of British intelligence and its efforts to thwart the submarine war waged by the gray wolves of the Kriegsmarine is not only a wonderful memoir of Bletchley Park, but an insightful and persuasive account of the complexities and difficulties of understanding one’s opponents in war. Beasley underlines that it was the understanding, not just the broken codes and technological superiority, that was the key ingredient in the Allied victory in the first great information war. This is a great read that offers the reader much for little effort.

War and Strategy Since 1945

Alistair Horne. A Savage War of Peace, Algeria, 1954–1962. Horne is a great historian of French military history and its less-than-successful record over the past 130 years. Horne’s greatest book is an examination of France’s great military victory in the Algerian War and its disastrous political defeat—a defeat that almost destroyed France. It is a tale that American strategists and military leaders should ponder as the American military embarks on wars against enemies about whom it knows little and understands less.

Lt. Gen. Harold Moore and Joseph Galloway. We Were Soldiers Once…and Young, Ia Drang — The Battle that Changed the War in Vietnam. Moore and Galloway have written by far and away the best piece of military history on one of the early battles of the Vietnam War. It is a story of effective and ineffective military leadership. It also should put to rest the claims of some commentators who claim that the US military lost none of the battles in the war. LANDING ZONE ALBANY was nothing other than a defeat that came close to being the twentieth century’s Battle of the Little Bighorn. This is a great book.
2. General Works: Military Theory and Strategy

Aron, Raymond. The Century of Total War. 1955.

Becke, A.F. An Introduction to the History of Tactics, 1740-1905. 1909.

 Best, Geoffrey. War and Society in Revolutionary Europe, 1789-1870.

Challener, R.D. The French Theory of the Nation in Arms.

von Clausewitz, Carl. Historical and Political Writings, edited and translated by Peter Paret and Donald Moran. 1992

Echevarria, Antulio J. After Clausewitz, German Military Thinkers before the Great War. 2000.

 Paret, Peter. Clausewitz and the State. 1976

 Richmond, Sir Herbert. Statesmen and Seapower. 1943.

* Watts, Barry D. Clausewitzian Friction and the Future of War. 1996

Williamson, James A. The Ocean in English History. 1941.
3. Ancient Warfare to 500 AD

Adcock, F. E. The Greek and Macedonian Art of War. 1957.

Adcock, F.E. The Roman Art of War under the Republic. 1940.

4. Medieval Warfare (500–1450)

 Froissart. Chronicles.

Keen, M.H. The Laws of War in the Late Middle Ages. 1965.

Smail, R.C. Crusading Warfare. 1956.
5. Early Modern Warfare (1450–1685)

Andre, Louis. Michel le Tellier and Louvois. 1942

Cruickshank, Charles C. Elizabeth’s Army. 1946.

Firth, C.H. Cromwell’s Army. 1962.

 Wedgwood, C.V. The King’s War, 1641-1647. 1958.

6. The Eighteenth Century (1686–1789)

Stacey, C.P. Quebec, 1759. 1959

7. The French Revolution and Napoleon (1789–1815)

Bell, Douglas. Wellington’s Officers. 1953.

Brinton, Crane. A Decade of Revolution, 1789–1799. 1934.

Bryant, Arthur. Years of Victory. 1945.

Davies, Geoffrey. Wellington and His Army. 1954.

Ford, G.S. Stein and the Era of Reform in Prussia, 1807–1815. 1922.

* Fortescue, J. Wellington. 1925.

Hahlweg, W. Prussischer Reformzeit und Revolutionärer Krieg. 1962.

Maude, F.N. The Leipzig Campaign, 1813. 1905.

 Palmer, Robert R. Twelve Who Ruled. 1941.

Quimby, Robert S. The Background of Napoleonic Warfare. 1957.

Tarle, Eugene. Napoleon's Invasion of Russia. 1942.

Thompson, J.M. Napoleon Bonaparte: His Rise and His Fall. 1951.

 Tolstoy, Leo. War and Peace. (numerous translations)

8. The Nineteenth Century (1815–1890)

Bonnal, H. Sadowa: A Study. 1907.

 Bucholz, Arden. Moltke and the German Wars, 1864-1871. 2001

 Wawro, Geoffrey. The Austro-Prussian War, Austria’s War with Prussia and Italy in 1866. 1996.

9. The American Civil War (1861–1865)

 Arnold, James R. Grant Wins the War, Decision at Vicksburg. 1997

 Catton, Bruce. Grant Takes Command. 1969.

* Freeman, Douglas S. Lee’s Lieutenants: A Study in Command, 3 vols. 1942-44.

* McPherson, James M. Drawn with the Sword, Reflections on the American Civil War. 1996.

Thomas, Benjamin P. Abraham Lincoln. 1957.

10. Naval Warfare to 1900

 Corbett, Julian S. Drake and the Tudor Navy, 2 vols. 1898.

 Corbett, Julian S. England in the Seven Years War, 2 vols. 1907.

 Corbett, Julian S. The Campaign of Trafalgar. 1910.

 Kennedy, Paul M. The Rise and Fall of British Naval Mastery. 1982.

 Marcus, G.J. Quiberon Bay. 1960.

Gwen, J.H. War at Sea Under Queen Anne, 1702-1708. 1938.

Thomason, George M. Sir Francis Drake. 1972.

11. First World War: Background (1890–1914)

von Bernhardi, F. Germany and the Next War. 1914.

Bloch, Ivan S. The Future of War. 1903.

 Deist, Wilhelm. The German Military in the Age of Total War. 1985.

Farrar, L. The Short War Illusion.

 Friedberg, Aaron. The Weary Titan, Britain and the Experience of Relative Decline, 195-1905. 1988

 Fuller, William. Civil-Military Conflict in Imperial Russia, 1881-1914. 1985.

 Herrmann, David G. The Armies of Europe and the Making of the First World War. 1996

 Kitchen, Martin. The German Officer Corps, 1890-1914. 1968.

 Reitz, Dennis. Commando. 1926.

Steiner, Zarc S. The Foreign Office and Foreign Policy, 1898-1914. 1969.

 Stevenson, David. Armaments and the Coming of War, Europe 1904-1914. 1996.

* Swinton, E.D. The Defense of Duffer’s Drift. 1902.

12. First World War: General (1914–1918)

Bean, C.E.W. The Story of ANZAC. 1924.

Clark, Alan. Suicide of the Empires. 1971.

* Crutwell, Charles R.M.F. The Role of British Strategy in the Great War. 1936.

 Fischer, Fritz. Germany’s Aims in the First World War. 1963.

 Hunt, Barry and Preston, Adrian. War Aims and Strategic Policy in the First World War. 1977.

Liddell Hart, B.H. Reputations. 1928.

Lucas, P.M.H. The Evolution of Tactical Ideas in France and Germany During the War of 1914-1918. 1925.

Waitt, Alden H. Smoke, Flame, and Gas in Modern War. 1944.

13. The First World War: Campaigns (1914–1918)

Ashworth, T. Trench Warfare.

Churchill, Winston S. The Unknown War. 1931.

Clark, Alan. The Donkeys. 1962.

 Cooper, Malcolm. The Birth of Independent Airpower. 1986.

Emin, Ahmed. Turkey in the World War. 1930.

Essame, H. The Battle for Europe: 1918.

 Farrar-Hockley, A. The Somme. 1964.

 Golovine, Nicholas. The Russian Army in the World War. 1932.

Golovine, Nicholas. The Russian Campaign of 1914. 1933.

 Harris, J.P. with Niall Barr, Amiens to the Armistice, The BEF in the Hundred Days’ Campaign, 8 August – 11 November 1918. 1998

James, Robert P. Gallipoli. 1965.

Moore, William. The Thin Yellow Line. 197-.

Sandars, H. St. G. Per Ardua: The Rise of British Air Power.

* Trumpener, Ulrich. Germany and the Ottoman Empire. 2001

Winter, Denis. Death’s Men.

 Wolf, Leone. In Flanders Fields. 1959.

* Wynne, G.C. If Germany Attaks: The Battle in Depth in the West. 1940.
14. The First World War: Literature

Barbusse, Henri. Under Fire.

 Graves, Robert. Goodbye to All That. 1929.

 Jünger, Ernst. Copse 129.

 Manning, Frederic. Her Privates We. 1930.

* Remarque, Eric M. All Quiet on the Western Front. 1930.

 Sassoon, Siegfried. Counterattack, and Other Poems. 1930.

* Witkop, Philip. German Students' War Diaries. 1928.

15. Naval Warfare (1900–1920)

Kehr, Ekhardt. Seeschlachtsflottenbau and Parteipolitik.

16. The First World War: Memoirs, Diaries, and Biographies

von Dellmensingen, Konrad Kraft. Der Durchbruch.

 Fuller, J.F.C. The Army in My Time. 1935.

* Groener, W. Der Feldherr wider Willen.

Lanzaerac, General Charles. Le Plan de Campagne francaise et le premier mois de la guerre.

 Marder, Arthur. Fear God and Dread Nought.

 Spears, Edward L. Prelude to Victory. 1939.

von Thaer, Albrecht. Generalstabsdienst an der Front und in der OHL.

17. The Interwar Period (1919–1939)

Carsten, F.L. The Reichswehr and Politics, 1918-1933.

 Fuller, J.F.C. The Army in My Time. 1935.

Fuller, J.F.C. Armored Warfare.

 Kiesling, Eugenia C. Arming Against Hitler, France and the Limits of Military Planning. 1996.

Meier-Weleker, Hans. Seeckt.

18. The Second World War: General Works

* Calvocoressi, Peter and Guy Wint. Total War.

Howell, Edgar H. German Army Antiguerrilla Operations in the Balkans, 1941-1944.

 Knox, MacGregor. Common Destiny: Dictatorship, Foreign Policy, and War in Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany. 2000.

 Lowenheim, Francis L., et al., Roosevelt and Churchill: Their Secret Wartime Correspondence.

Pelling, Henry. Britain and the Second World War.

Smith, Dennis Mack. Mussolini.

Strawson, John. Hitler as Military Commander.

19. The Second World War: Strategy

 Matloff, Maurice. Strategic Planning for Coalition Warfare, 1943-1944. 1953

 Wilt, Alan F. War from the Top, German and British Decision Making during World War II. 1990.

* Beaufre, Andre. 1940: The Fall of France. 1968.

 Blumenson, Martin. Salerno to Cassino.

 Blumenson, Martin. The Battle of the Generals, The Untold Story of the Falaise Pocket. 1993

 Ellis, L.F. Victory In the West. 1962.

 Howe, George M. Northwest Africa: Seizing the Initiative in the West. 1957.

 Jacobsen, H.A. Fall Gelb: Der Kampf um den deutschen Operationsplan zur Westoffensive. 1957.

 Kennedy, R.M. The German Campaign in Poland. 1956.

 Lewis, Adrian R. Omaha Beach, A Flawed Victory. 2001.

Rohde, Horst. Das deutsche Wehrmachtransportwesen im Zweiten Weltkrieg.

 Bartov, Omer. The Eastern Front, 1941-45: German Troops and the Barbarization of Warfare.

* Bialer, Seweryn. Stalin and His Generals. 1969.

* Blau, George E. The German Campaign in Russia: Planning and Operations, 1940-1942.

Cecil, Robert. Hitler's Decision to Invade Russia, 1941. 1975.

 Erickson, John. The Soviet High Command. 1962.

* Erickson, John. The Road to Stalingrad. 1975.

 Glantz, David M. Barbarossa, Hitler's Invasion of Russia, 1941. 2001.

Hesse, Erich. Der Sowjet-Russiche Partisankrieg, 1941-1944.

 Klink, E. Das Gestetz des Handelns: Die Operation Zitadell.

Niepold, Gerd. The Battle for White Russia: The Destruction of Army Group Centre, June 1944. 1982

Office of the Chief of Military History. Military Improvisations During the Russian Campaign.

 Philippi, A. and Heim, F. Der Feldzug gegen Sowjetrussland.

 Seaton, Col. Albert. The Russo-German War, 1941-1945. 1971.

22. The Second World War: Air Power

* Collier, Basil. Leader of the Few.

 Craven, Wesley and James L. Cate, editors. The Army Air Forces in World War II, 8 vols. 1948.

Douhet, Giulio. The Command of the Air. many editions.

 Frankland, Noble. The Bombing Offensive Against Germany. 1965.

Green, Thomas H. The Development of Air Doctrine in the Army Air Corps. 1955.

Jones, S.E. Bomber Intelligence. 1983.

Mason, Francis K. Battle Over Britain. 1968.

The United States Strategic Bombing Survey. 4

---

4 Available on a number of Web sites.
23. The Second World War: Memoirs, Diaries, Biographies, and Literature

   Bradley, Oman N. A Soldier’s Story. 1951.

 Fest, Joachim. Hitler. 1974.

* Fraser, David. Knight’s Cross, A Life of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel. 1993.

 Fraser, George MacDonald. Quartered Safe Out Here, A Recollection of the War in Burma. 1992.

Galland, Adolf. The First and the Last. 1955.
  Gavin, James M.  On To Berlin. 1978.

  Hoth, Hermann.  Panzer-Operationen.

Mack Smith, Dennis.  Mussolini.

 Mason, Theordore C. Battleship Sailor. 1982

 Moss, Stanley. Ill Met by Moonlight. 1950.

 Mowat, Farley. And No Birds Sang. 1957

Saward, Dudley. “Bomber” Harris. 1985.

 Sledge, E.B. With the Old Breed at Peleliu and Okinawa. 1981.

 Steinhoff, Johannes. Messerschmidts over Sicily. 1987

24. The Second World War: The War at Sea and in the Pacific

Butow, Robert J. Japan’s Decision to Surrender. 1954.

Butow, Robert J. Tojo and the Coming of the War. 1961.

 Chang, Iris. The Rape of Nanking, The Forgotten Holocaust of World War II. 1997.

Admiral of the Fleet. Viscount Cunningham, A Sailor’s Odyssey. 1951.

 Isely, Jeter and Philip A. Crowl. The U.S. Marines and Amphibious War. 1951

Liu, F.F. A Military History of Modern China, 1924-1949.

Martin, B. Deutschland and Japan im Zweiten Weltkrieg.

McIntyre, W. David. Rise and Fall of the Singapore Naval Base.

O’Conner, Raymond. The Japanese Fleet in World War II.

25. The Second World War: Intelligence (1939–1945)

 Wark, Wesley K. The Ultimate Enemy: British Intelligence and Nazi Germany, 1933-1939. 1985.

26. War and Strategy Since 1945

* Downs, Frederick. The Aftermath. 1978.

 Fall, Bernard. The Two Vietnams, A Political Military Analysis. 1968.

* Gaddis, John Lewis. We Now Know, Rethinking Cold War History. 1997.

Major Works Published by Williamson Murray:

Luftwaffe, 1933-1934 (Nautical and Aviation Press: Baltimore, MD, 1985)

German Military Effectiveness (Nautical and Aviation Press: Baltimore, 1992)

Air War in the Persian Gulf (Nautical and Aviation Press: Baltimore, MD, 1995)

Major Works Coauthored by Williamson Murray:

Warfare in the Western World, general editors Robert Doughty and Ira
Gruber (DC Heath: Lexington, MA, 1995)

A War To Be Won, Fighting the Second World War, coauthored with Allan R. Millett (Harvard University Press: Cambridge, MA, 2000)

Major Edited Works:

Calculations, Net Assessment and the Coming of World War II, ed. with Allen R. Millett (Free Press: New York, 1992)

The Emerging Strategic Environment (Praeger: Westport, CT, 1999)

The Dynamics of Military Revolution, ed. with MacGregor Knox (Cambridge University Press: Cambridge, 2001)

Conflicting Currents, Japan and the United States in the Pacific, ed. with Tomoyuki Ishizu (ABC Clio Press: Santa Barbara, CA, 2009)

Saddam’s War, An Iraqi Military Perspective of the Iran-Iraq War, with Kevin Woods and Thomas Holaday (Washington, DC: NDU Press, 2009)

Major Works Accepted for Publication:

Successful Strategies, ed. with Richard Hart Sinnreich, publication accepted by Cambridge University Press for 2014

The Iran-Iraq War, coauthored with Kevin Woods, publication accepted by Cambridge University Press for 2014

Major Works in Progress:
World War I, A History (proposal accepted by Cambridge University Press)